

Natural Substances: Diamond

Diamond is the hardest known natural substance. Although about a quarter of a million pounds of diamonds are synthetically created for industry each year, almost nine billion dollars' worth are still mined from natural sources. Most natural diamonds come from Africa, but they are also mined in Australia, Brazil, Canada, India, and Russia.

